Neither Does the Editor

A man who owns eighty acres of land and has brains enough to till it, makes the lot of the country newspaper men look like the last sad remnants of a Dutch lunch. The farmer has the best of it all around. He's as independent as an express company. He doesn't have to write a soulful obituary over some peak-headed fellow who kept on displaying an exhibit of cut-plug profanity that would make the efforts of a steamboat mate sound like a meeting of the Epworth League. He doesn't have to go into raptures over the beauty of an open-face bride with a cast of countenance that would blow out the gas. The farmer doesn't have to lie until his back teeth fall out, about the sterling manhood of a groom with ears like a cauliflower plant and the brain power of a shont. He doesn't have to run a contest for the most beautiful young lady in the community, make everybody sore about the winner and then print a seventy-five-cent halftone of the beauty that looks like grandma at the age of thirteen. Had to Work Overtime

Two Irishmen died. One went to heaven and the other went to hell. Mike called from heaven and ask Pat how he was getting along. "I am shoveling coal," said Pat. "Do you have to work very hard?" "Not very," he said. "We have shifts. I only work three hours a day." Pat then inquired of Mike how he was making it. "I'm sweeping down the golden stairs." "Do you have to work very hard?" "Yes," said Mike. "I have to work eighteen hours a day as we are short of men up here."

"White Man Heap Liar"

An Indian was once told by a white man that feathers made a soft bed. The Indian took one feather and laid on it all night. The next morning he said: "White man heap liar. Feather no good bed." That is the way with a great many merchants. They put one little ad in the paper and leave it a week. If it doesn't make them rich they condemn advertising as no good. Ex.
